

Savanna Stewart
16 February 2024
Word count: 200

Valentine's Day

Valentine's Day allows for times spent with friends, family and significant others.

Ella Glaze, Columbian, Ala., freshman, doesn't have many plans for this Valentine's Day, but looks back at past Valentine's days.

"My parents would put out massive balloons and would have Krispy Kreme donuts downstairs for us in the morning," Glaze said.

Glaze and her family would always spend the holiday together looking back on memories and focusing on the love in their life within their family.

Glaze remembers celebrating Valentine's Day with her classmates and teachers in elementary school.

"Our school would create mailboxes and make candy valentines and go around the class and each person would drop them in the mailbox," Glaze said.

Being from Alabama, Glaze continues to meet new people, so this Valentine's Day will look different than those with her family.

"Back home I spent Valentine's Day with my family, and I won't be with my family this year," Glaze said.

This Valentine's Day, Glaze plans on studying for a math test and doing homework for upcoming assignments.

Glaze is focused on school right now and although she is not celebrating this year, she is excited to celebrate in years to come.